LATE RENT NOTICE - FILE DOCUMENTATION ASSESSMENT REPORT

Report No.: SPM-2026-LRN-0047

Date of Assessment:

Conducted By:

June 16, 2026 Patricia Nguyen, Property Manager - Star Property Management

Subject of Assessment: Filing and record-keeping review for the first late-rent notice issued to tenant Tanya Mitchell, covering the June 2026 rent balance for her unit - specifically confirming that a dated copy of the notice has been properly saved to the tenant's property management file directory on the shared document drive.

Properties in Scope: Units 4B and 214 (Tanya Mitchell tenancy files)

SECTION 1 - EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

I conducted this assessment on June 16, 2026, to verify that the first late-rent notice issued to tenant Tanya Mitchell for the June 2026 billing period has been correctly dated, saved, and filed within her active tenant folder on the shared document drive, in accordance with Star Property Management's standard records-retention and compliance procedures. Overall, the filing was completed successfully and the notice document is properly named, dated, and located in the correct directory path. Two associated email notices one addressed to Unit 4B and one to Unit 214 - were sent to the tenant prior to this filing step, and both outgoing communications are accounted for in the record. A coordinating note was also communicated to Teresa Wood (accounting liaison) via Slack so that the account status could be flagged on the QuickBooks side. No critical deficiencies were found; however, this report notes several housekeeping and procedural follow-up items that should be addressed to ensure the file remains audit-ready and the collections timeline stays on track.

SECTION 2 - DETAILED FINDINGS

2.1 TENANT FILE DIRECTORY - DOCUMENT DRIVE

Condition Observed: I navigated to the shared document drive and located Tanya Mitchell's active tenant folder. Within that folder, I confirmed that the first late-rent notice for June 2026 has been saved as a dated PDF file. The filename includes the notice date (June 16, 2026), the tenant name, and the notice type, which is consistent with Star Property Management's established file-naming convention for collections-related correspondence. The document is stored under the correct subdirectory for outgoing notices and legal correspondence within the tenant's file.

Issues / Follow-Up: The file is present and correctly named; however, I noticed that no corresponding receipt-of-notice log entry has yet been appended to the file's notes sub-folder. Star Property Management's procedure calls for a brief plain-text entry confirming the delivery method and date whenever a formal notice is issued. That log entry still needs to be created and saved alongside the notice document to complete the filing.

2.2 NOTICE DOCUMENT CONTENT AND DATING

Condition Observed: I opened the saved notice document and reviewed its content. The letter is addressed to Tanya Mitchell, references the June 2026 rent balance as past the applicable grace period, and carries today's date - June 16, 2026 - on its face. The body of the letter states the outstanding amount due, identifies the unit, and includes the required language notifying the tenant of the late charge and the cure deadline. The letter is signed with my name and title on behalf of Star Property Management.

Issues / Follow-Up: The notice document itself is well-formed and complete. One minor item: the letter references a late-fee amount consistent with the lease terms, but I recommend verifying against the executed lease addendum on file before the cure deadline passes, in case a lease renewal or addendum modified the late-fee schedule. No other content issues were observed.

2.3 EMAIL DELIVERY RECORDS (UNIT 4B AND UNIT 214)

Condition Observed: I reviewed the outgoing email correspondence associated with this notice event. Two email messages were sent to Tanya Mitchell: one referencing the June balance due for Unit 4B and one referencing Unit 214. Both emails were sent from my Star Property Management email account on June 16, 2026, with subject lines identifying them as late-rent notices. Copies of both sent emails are visible in the sent folder and are time-stamped on today's date.

Issues / Follow-Up: Because two unit references appear in the email record (Unit 4B and Unit 214), I recommend clarifying in the tenant's master file which unit designation is the official one of record for Tanya Mitchell's current lease. If both designations refer to the same physical unit under two different labeling conventions, that discrepancy should be noted in the file and one designation should be set as primary going forward to avoid confusion in any future eviction filing or court documentation.

2.4 AIRTABLE COLLECTIONS RECORD

Condition Observed: I reviewed the Airtable record corresponding to this late-rent notice event. The record reflects that Tanya Mitchell's June rent was entered as past the grace period, the first-notice status is marked, and the record date aligns with today's action. The record is associated with the correct property and tenant name.

Issues / Follow-Up: The Airtable record's notice document attachment field is currently unpopulated - the saved PDF has not yet been attached to the record. Attaching the notice document directly to the Airtable record in addition to the shared drive filing is standard practice at Star Property Management so that the collections record is self-contained for tracking purposes. I intend to attach the document to this record promptly following completion of this assessment.

2.5 ACCOUNTING COORDINATION (QUICKBOOKS / TERESA WOOD)

Condition Observed: Earlier today I notified Teresa Wood via Slack that Tanya Mitchell's June rent is past the grace period, so that the account status could be updated on the accounting side in QuickBooks. Teresa acknowledged receipt and confirmed she would note the account status accordingly.

Issues / Follow-Up: No issues were observed with the coordination step itself. However, the file should reflect written confirmation from Teresa that the QuickBooks account flag has actually been applied. At present, the confirmation exists only in Slack. I recommend that Teresa send a brief email or add a note to the shared drive file confirming the QuickBooks status update, so the paper trail is consolidated and accessible outside of Slack.

2.6 LEASING CRM (HUBSPOT) RECORD CHECK

Condition Observed: I checked Tanya Mitchell's contact record in the HubSpot leasing CRM to confirm that the late-notice activity is reflected there. The contact record exists and is associated with the correct property and unit. The most recent activity log in HubSpot shows the outgoing email notices sent today.

Issues / Follow-Up: HubSpot is primarily a leasing intake tool at Star Property Management, and ongoing collections activity is not always systematically logged there; however, because Tanya Mitchell's contact record is actively managed in HubSpot, it is good practice to add a contact note indicating that a first late-notice has been issued, so that any leasing agent or Brooke Phillips reviewing the record is aware of the current status and does not initiate a renewal conversation without context. I recommend adding this note to the HubSpot record.

2.7 INTERNAL LEASING TEAM AWARENESS (BROOKE PHILLIPS)

Condition Observed: Brooke Phillips, as a member of the leasing team, has an interest in knowing when an active tenant's account moves into collections status, particularly if any lease renewal discussions are pending or anticipated. I reviewed today's communications and found that Brooke has not yet been formally notified of Tanya Mitchell's current delinquency.

Issues / Follow-Up: A brief internal notice to Brooke Phillips should be sent - via Slack or email - so that the leasing team's records reflect the tenant's current account standing. This is a standard internal coordination step whenever a formal late notice is issued, and it prevents miscommunication if the tenant contacts the leasing office directly.

SECTION 3 - RECOMMENDATIONS AND NEXT STEPS

1. COMPLETE THE DELIVERY LOG ENTRY - Add a brief plain-text receipt-of-notice log entry to the notes sub-folder within Tanya Mitchell's tenant file on the shared document drive, documenting today's date, the delivery method (email), and the unit references covered by the notice. This finalizes the filing and ensures the record is audit-ready. 2. RESOLVE THE UNIT DESIGNATION DISCREPANCY - Determine whether Unit 4B and Unit 214 refer to the same physical unit or to two distinct units. Annotate the master file with a clear explanation, designate one label as the official unit identifier of record, and apply that designation consistently in all future correspondence, Airtable records, and any eviction documentation. 3. ATTACH THE NOTICE PDF TO THE AIRTABLE RECORD - Upload the saved notice document to the attachment field in the Airtable collections record for Tanya Mitchell's June late-rent event so the record is self-contained and the notice is accessible without navigating to the shared drive separately. 4. OBTAIN WRITTEN CONFIRMATION FROM TERESA WOOD - Request that Teresa Wood provide email or shared-drive confirmation that Tanya Mitchell's account has been flagged in QuickBooks as delinquent for June, so the accounting coordination is documented in a retrievable format outside of Slack. 5. ADD A COLLECTIONS NOTE IN HUBSPOT - Log a contact note on Tanya Mitchell's HubSpot record indicating that a first late-rent notice has been issued as of June 16, 2026, so that leasing staff have full context when reviewing her record. 6. NOTIFY BROOKE PHILLIPS - Send Brooke Phillips a brief Slack message or email informing her that Tanya Mitchell's account is in first-notice collections status for the June period, so the leasing team's awareness is current. 7. VERIFY LATE-FEE SCHEDULE AGAINST EXECUTED LEASE - Before the cure deadline stated in the notice, confirm that the late-fee amount cited in the letter matches the most recently executed lease or lease addendum on file for Tanya Mitchell, and document the verification result in the tenant's file. 8. MONITOR CURE DEADLINE - Track the cure deadline specified in the first late-rent notice. If payment or a payment arrangement is not received by that date, initiate the second-notice or eviction-preparation step per Star Property Management's collections escalation policy, and ensure all relevant parties - Teresa Wood, Brooke Phillips, and ownership - are informed at that time.
